Foreword

In the succeeding pages is to be found the result of the labors of the "Torch" staff. We have attempted therein to reflect a little bit about activities of the class and those who compose it. Through the help of the individual quotations, selected with all personal feeling submerged, we hoped to present to you each senior as we remember him. Whether we have succeeded is for you to decide.

DEDICATION

To Mr. Haeseler, in sincere appreciation of his kindness and his loyalty to our class, do we dedicate this, our Torch of January, 1937.

Paul R. Haiseler

THANKS!

Upon Mr. Ralston and the faculty we bestow a hearty vote of thanks for their sincere efforts in preparing us to be better students in the school of Life.

Lots of Luck

Editorial

SOMEWHAT inexplicable but nevertheless true, is the fact that the human mind associates power, fame, and achievement with height. So in their journey through time and space people are wont to conceive of life as a long climb, particularly if the individual has set for himself a goal which he is determined to reach. We see and hear this theme all about us. For example, the Eiffel Tower, the Empire State building, the familiar quotation, "Hitch your wagon to a star."

Each rut and stone that is stepped over, each pitfall that is crossed, is a successful achievement, a step nearer the desired goal.

And such a conception or philosophy is a useful one and carries interesting implications. Applying it to ourselves we may regard graduation from grammar school and high school as hostelry in our climb up the Alps of Life. As we rest temporarily from our labors, we get a broader view of the valley below. Facts we could not appreciate when we were hundreds of feet below now impress us deeply. Certain relationships we did not see before, now become clear. Things which appeared entirely unrelated before, now become part of the whole. As Emerson says,

"All are needed by each one,

Nothing is great or good alone."

Many skills, for which we thought we had no use and which were consequently neglected, give us by their absence a painful realization of their usefulness. But the climb is still young. Mistakes and errors may be rectified and subsequently more care will be taken.

As we ascend, there will be great difficulties—wide crevices and ravines—in this mountain of Life and individually we shall hardly be able to surmount these difficulties. If we bind ourselves with stout firm lines, and make judicious use of our staffs of cooperative spirit, we shall easily succeed.

It is wise to listen to the advice of those who have been over this climb before. So let us be well prepared. Let us take as much with us as can be borne comfortably. Let us take the climb in as firm, constant, and smooth stride as possible. Let us not become too adventurous, or separate from our fellow-climbers and wander into obvious difficulty.

With this exhortation, with the common sense which is ours, and with experience we shall readily gain, the climb will not be more difficult for us than it has been for those who preceded us. The atmosphere is now clearer and the sun brighter than it has been for several years in the past.

Let us, therefore, resolve to make our journey a pleasant one.

Class History

FEBRUARY 1933—FEBRUARY 1937

A HORDE of grammar school graduates filled with infinite wisdom paraded through the halls of East Side High School for the first time in the year nineteen hundred and thirty-three. We were accosted by imposing, scornful seniors who severely reproved us for infracting the regulations of the school.

Disgusted in not finding the elevators which we were assured were in the building, the little angels trod the stairs and were guided through the one-way traffic from room to room.

Much to our keen disappointment, the Freshmen Frolic program, for reasons unknown, was denied us. The main attraction was to be the accompanying gift, a lollypop. To think that we had been denying ourselves sweets for days for the main purpose of enjoying the anticipated charm to its fullest extent.

However, our spirits were soon revived. The commercial, technical, musical, and literary resources of the school were made known to us from which we were to reap a vast amount of knowledge and pleasure. Another important feature was that each student was to meet new friends. One of the essentials of our training and education is to be able to make new friends and to co-operate with one another. Thus the freshies took their hands out of their pockets, hoisted the anchor and steered for the open sea with all hands on deck.

Sophomores! What a relief not to be called freshmen anymore. The new freshmen were soon given a dose of high school hospitality which was very unexpected.

Along with our fun also came our troubles. We had advanced and were taking advanced subjects. In the mathematic's class, one did not know whether the pupils were marveling at the wonders of algebra or the contrast of the white chalk on the black slate. We were introduced to that grand fellow, Caesar, both in Latin and English. Those of the German class can well remember Miss Bernkopf's gallant fight with the weak verbs. The would-be typists' enthusiasm waned all too soon when they became accustomed to the routine. Cooking and sewing were taken up by the girls. The cooks must have been a great success for we still can smell the delightful (?) aroma of their chili sauce. Sophistication became another important issue, among the girls. They became make-up artists and began to attend the weekly 4A dances. All the wiles and charms of Cleopatra were exercised to vamp the senior boys but to no avail. Taking all, in all, we were taking an interest in the academic and commercial subjects, athletics, and social activities.

We entered the third year older and wiser individuals. We were elated because we knew we were going to the assembly with the seniors.

As to our knowledge, we learned from Mr. Laughton which way the wind was blowing by wetting our fingers and holding them out of the window. From Mr. Butterworth's lectures, we learned many interesting facts pertaining to the hardships of life.

However the teachers have taught us truths vital to our future though we evidently didn't think so at the time.

In the second half of our third year our class was organized and Mr. Haeseler was appointed our class advisor. The first class officers were George Kranick, President; Jane Gustave, Vice-President; John Fitzsimmons, Secretary, and Andrew Buzcak, Treasurer.

The Senior year rolled around and proved to be the most eventful of the entire four years. We elected Senior B officers and they were George Kranick, President; Lillian Camy, Vice-President; Joseph Zuckerbrod, Secretary, and Andrew Buzcak, Treasurer.

First we were ushered into the realms of "United States History" where we struggled with the political and historical development of the United States. Then the sweet-smelling aromas of the chemistry class were inhaled with a choke and a smile. Of course we were "rec'ed" by the Senior "A's" and found ourselves full-pledged seniors. After the ceremony we went upstairs where we had a fine time dancing, playing games and enjoying the delicacies prepared for us.

Passed on to the "A" grade we again elected officers. The President and Treasurer kept their offices for the third time. Jane Gustav and Anne Palumbo were elected Vice-President and Secretary, respectively. The weekly dances were organized and special attractions were featured which afforded an enjoyable time to all participants. The Torch Staff was chosen with Joseph Zuckerbrod as the editor. Members of the staff were seen hustling and bustling about looking for material. Then there was our play, "Man or Mouse" which proved to be a great success under the able guidance of Miss Kartluke.

Now the outside world was beckoning us. Soon we were to pass through the portals into the maze of life. Although we were eager to step out into the world, many of us were touched with sadness at leaving our dear Alma Mater which had been our haven and shelter for four years. Yet one must travel onward to bring about the realization of lofty aspirations. Our ship of state had put into port and left in its wake fond recollection. The success of our further adventures in life will depend on the success of our voyage.

"Nothing succeeds like success."

Athletes

AS sports writer of The Torch, it is my bitter and sad duty to expose at last the frightful disgrace brought upon this fair school by those gladiators of the gridiron, diamond, track, and other sport fields whom we call our athletes—and at times a few other names. Sit back, dear public, it's nothing to gossip about,—merely the fact that the athletes of this class have committed the athlete's unforgivable sin; they have been good students. Some have even been forward enough to make the honor roll. Gone forever is the day of the bullying, cutting athlete. Let the tears run unrestrained.

First on the list of these unspeakables is that fair-haired darling of the ladies, Kurt Greulich, captain of the football team in '36. Kurt plays the saxophone, has blond curly hair, and has a charming, polite manner. At the time this is being written, he is just recovering from the severe shock of making the honor roll—sissy! Oh, yes, in addition, he was the backbone of the football team in '35 and '36, and earned his letter in both years, having excelled as a field runner and vicious tackler.

Our next specimen answers to the name of "Johnnie" Blazak. Another one who earned his letter with the football team in both '35 and '36. Despite the fact he too has been included on the honor roll—though not too often. He played a dependable brand of ball as end for the team, and also excelled as an outfielder on the baseball team in '35, for which he earned his letter.

George Laubenstein, Lou Horwitz's star full back in '35 and '36, is a gentleman we had better speak well of. You see, he also excels at weight lifting and is a good wrestler. George was a bulwark on defense in football, as well as a hard plunging back. Oh, yes, he's popular with the girls.

Thomas De Falco has always been a boy who minded his own business. Therefore, we think it's best for us to mind ours and say nothing disrespectful of one of the most capable guards East Side ever had. Although rather small for a guard, he filled his position well. As Tommy himself has never told this fact to anyone it's just as well we informed you—he sports two large letters for '35 and '36, if the girls are interested.

Ah! Peter Finnegan. At last a man worthy of being called an athlete. It's really a shame this credit to the sports world could not perform after doing a fine job with the football team in '33. An injury to the knee kept him out in the following years. That sweet Irish tenor voice has preserved his fame, though. Oh yes, Pete's public will miss him.

From Peter we move on to William Janiska, a real player as far as sports are concerned. Bill started the football season in '36, as a substitute, and proved to be so good that he soon broke into the lineup and played an excellent brand of ball in the backfield. He was also a dependable third baseman on the baseball team in '36.

Now for our Adonis of the Sports World, none other than Sir "Jake" Alcamo. "Jake" played a sparkling game at second base with Mr. Butterworth's baseball wonders in '36, and though one of the smallest players on the squad, he made up in ability for what he lacked in size.

And now, a gentle warning for those with evil designs on Joseph Teresco. The wonder boy of Horace Butterworth's gym squad for the last four years spends most of his time drilling at the Y. M. C. A., so just leave his girl-friend alone. Joe was State and Metropolitan champion on the rings and horizontal bar in '35 and '36, and city champion in '33, '34, and '35. He was also city champion on the parallel bars in '35 and '36. We are sure he will be missed.

Another capable member of the gym squad was Emery Fisher. Fisher performed with the gymnasts in '33, '34, '35, and '36. He won the City, State and Metropolitan championship on the side horse in '35 and '36. A very good dancer, and a favorite with the fair sex.

Gustave Schwarz completes our list of gymnastic stars. Gus earned his letter in '35 and '36, as a top-notch performer on the side horse.

Another who helped carry East Side's banner on the athletic field is George Kranick, who earned his letter on the track squad in '35 and '36 as a hurdler. A neat dresser, and a very charming president of the 4A class. Step up girls, and no crowding, please.

"Johnnie" Banks, captain of the swimming team, and one of its bulwarks is another who will leave us. Banks earned his letter in '35 and '36, scoring most points for the swimming team, and placing second in the back stroke at the city meet in '36. Tall, blond and good looking. Who knows, another Weissmuller may be in the making.

George Hartnagel is another member of the swimming squad whom Coach "Dick" Miller will miss. George was one of the most dependable swimmers on the squad.

And last, but not least, we list those boys, who, though they performed only on the second teams of their respective squads, always played their parts well. These include Walter Gwasdacz, Baseball; Charlie Yanulevich, John Napurano, Robert Golden, and Joe Fresolone, Football.

The 4A Play

THAT momentous night, December 11, 1936, the night on which the 4A class presented the three-act play, "Man or Mouse," had finally arrived. After weeks of suspense, a large audience greeted the presentation with extreme delight.

Everybody immediately fell in love with the already popular Sonya Greulich when she appeared as Peggy Lou, the tomboy heroine.

For the first time in his good-natured life, Howard Schantz, who was disguised as the villainous Joe Dawson, was intensely and unanimously disliked. As a matter of fact, he was almost hated.

The hero, Russell Van Horn, was played by the famous George Kranick. More than one feminine heart skipped a beat when our Apollo made his entrances. Even the hard-hearted males assumed an "I told you so" air when Russell, in a tense moment, discovered that he was not yellow.

Those two small town characters, Nippy Simpson and Rainbow Runkel were played by Albert Manna and Michael Neglia, respectively. We thought that Nippy, the handy man around the hotel, was cleverly portrayed by Albert. Nippy's accurate knowledge of statistics was most amusing to the audience. And we wanted to shout with glee when Rainbow always made his important arrival after the excitement had subsided.

Florence Satzger and Abe Williams, as the parents of Russell Van Horn were extremely different personalities. Mrs. Van Horn exhibited courage; Mr. Van Horn timidity. Mrs. Van Horn believed in facing trouble; Mr. Van Horn wanted peace at any price.

The Van Horn's close friends the Willoughby's were played by Gustave Schwarz, Helen Golumbus, and Muriel Glassman. In this family Mr. Willoughby was the strong character, while Mrs. Willoughby was the timid one. Their daughter, Hope, was a pampered, snobbish coward.

Mrs. McFadden, a lovable woman who liked and understood people, was played by Jane Gustav. William Schwarz, turned in a fine and sympathetic portrayal of Old Proby, the Civil War veteran who lived in the past.

The success of the play was due to the excellent co-operation the 4A Class received from the members of both the faculty and the student body. Miss Martin is to be praised for the splendid work in advertising. Once again, Miss Martin proved her friendship to the 4A Class.

Backstage, Casimir Harkiewicz, Emery Fisher, and Charles Cosenza, assumed the responsibility for the scenery, lighting effects, curtain and the other countless tasks which always expectedly arise in the presentation of a play.

We are very greatly indebted to Miss Kartluke, who gave her time and effort most generously to directing "Man or Mouse." The cast was most fortunate in having such an able director.

All in all, the play was very successful, for the large audience received "Man or Mouse" with pleasure and the 4A Coffers assumed new and better proportions.

We Quote:—

MR. McCracken:

"Boy, for some of my wife's good old Irish stew."

MR. MILLER:

"In the classroom I like to be non-partisan and I don't like to talk politics, but...."

MR. LAGLAS:

"And, just one more thing, Boys."

MR. DALRYMPLE:

"President Roosevelt is trying to make a dictatorship of this country!"

MISS KARTLUKE:

"Say something, say anything, I won't reprimand you if it's wrong!" (Oh Yeah!)

MR. BUTTERWORTH:

"It's the little things in life that count, boys!"

MR. SUTTON:

"That doesn't amount to a hill of beans!"

MISS CLAYTON:

"Now, when I went to school . . ."

MISS CAMPION:

"In polite society, gentlemen always . . ."

MISS CLEARY:

"Now dear children . . ."

Senior Anecdotes

IT happened one afternoon just after we fellows had partaken of some tender morsels of concentrated energy within the confines of the beautiful and spacious boys' lunch room. We were attending a history class and as usual we were placed in the incapable care of a male substitute. Well the "bugs" got us, for in no time at all the entire class was in a very jolly mood, perhaps too jolly, for suddenly a voice sounded above the "hub dub"—

"Hey, you with the alphabet," and a menacing forefinger was directed at an "E" adorning the manly figure of our illustrious president. The appearance on Mr. Kranick's countenance changed from one of jollity to one of complete scorn. Then to the consternation of the class our president quickly rose from his seat and said,

"I beg your pardon, but this is not an alphabet but a reward that I have earned pounding the cinder paths for dear old East Side."

This rebuke was more than the substitute could stand, for he then said with an injection of anger into every syllable—

"To the office with you."

"I'm ready when you're ready," responds George. And then—well for the finale you've just got to see Mr. Miller.

This very memorable and amusing incident took place in Room 115 many months ago, with both Mr. Smith and the class participating. The class was deeply engrossed in solving the problems presented by the commercial contrivances in Room 115 when Albert Martone, returned, (Mr. Smith had excused him a little while previously) and caused the students to look up. Al walked up to Mr. Smith, and, with a Saint-like expression that only Martone can manage to produce, said to him:

"Mr. Smith, Miss Erbacher would like to speak to you."

With the excitement of a young man going to see his best girl, Mr. Smith adjusted his neck tie, fixed his vest just so, and saw to it that his jacket was free of anything that marked ungentlemanly dress and then proceeded to the door. What caused him to turn is still a mystery. It may have been that intuition which only a member of the faculty can possess or the unrestrained mirth of one of the pupils that caused it, but turn around he did. From behind handkerchiefs came the outburst of laughter and Mr. Smith needed no further explanation. And so they laughed. Mr. Smith joined in, and they laughed some more. For you see this happened on the first of April.

Tramp, Tramp! Tramp! A group of seniors were seen lazily walking into Mr. Tuckley's English room at the beginning of the 7th period. There was an unusual quiet reigning over the room; what would happen? Mr. Tuckley, feeling quite drowsy, gave our assignment and went to the back of the room to rest. Meanwhile a note had been passed around the class reading, "Ten to two, tie your shoe." At a quarter to two most of the class had accompanied Mr. Tuckley in beautiful slumber, but Harkiewicz blew his nose and everyone woke up, including Mr. Tuckley. At last the designated time had come but our plans went wrong. Only Sir Fisher, Sir Haber, Sir Marchak, and Sir D'Alessio, those brave knights, bent down to tie their shoe-laces. The others began to giggle and this finally wound up in a very loud laughing. By this time, Mr. Tuckley was aware that something was up. Zuckerbrod was unable to control his smile and it broke into something a bit noisier, and Mr. Tuckley saw it necessary to escort him to the exit. Imagine our editor being "asked to leave" the class room. Tsk, Tsk.

It was the day after the Hindenburg had made its thrilling flight across the Atlantic. The students in the eighth period English class were just starting the most terrific battle of the term—the battle of "Rabbi Ben Ezra," when our instructor unwittingly made the remark that the only thing that would keep her away from class for a while would be to get her a passage on the Hindenburg.

This statement took the class by storm for we even got a special treasurer and soliciting committee appointed.

Business fell badly in the lunch room and in the movie houses about town as coin by coin was dropped into the treasurer's box. But alas the sum to be obtained was too great and we (poor fellows) had to renew our struggle with Mr. Browning and his invulnerable troops under the generalship of "Rabbi Ben Ezra."

PANDEMONIUM! The S. S. Ironbound was eight hours late; Casimer Harke-wicz, the radio operator had been playing chess with E. Swanwick, head chemist of the Amalgamated Stynk Company. J. Kerrigan, the captain, was watching with his pipe in his mouth, and he became so interested in the game that he forgot to give orders, causing the ship to stray from its course. To appease the impatience of the passengers, amongst whom was that distinguished lady of society, Muriel Glassman, recent Imperial Duchess of the Order of the Frogs, Nick Marchak, Chief Steward, called out the goddess-like chorus troupe, led by the exotic Sonya Greulich and including Adele Tortorella, Bella Zerbino, Elsie Scheunert, Jennie Alaimo, Beatrice Skorupski, Elizabeth LaMotta, and Louise Haney. Then Park-Your-Carcas Korab entertained with a few choice remarks (hot off the griddle). Lillian Camy sang one of C. A. Manna's new popular hits from Giovanni D'Allessio's Broadway success, "Melody in Be Flat." Anthony DelPezzo performed some of Shampoo the Magician's stunts.

Finally, through the combined efforts of the Chief Engineer, Carmen Fresulone, and the Coal Stoker, Carmen Galante, the ship glided safely into the arms of the friendly harbor of San Francisco. While in town, we were attracted by the advertisement of the Zuckerbrod and Malangone modernistic department store. We entered and the floorwalker, Frank Dauksis, escorted us through the various departments.

The first was the Sports Department where DeFalco and Alcamo were in charge and, as a special treat, E. Fisher and J. Teresco gave exhibitions in gymnastics and Aggie Reznak and G. Schwarz gave talks on the "Body Perfect." Kurt Greulich and G. Laubenstein rendered short discussions on football.

We next idled over to the Ladies Clothing Department, where we found Flo Satzger selling women's oversized lingerie. We were now enraptured by the grand appearance of the glamorous Dagmar Hadenberg, the beautiful mannikin, displaying the striking creations of Monsieur A. Spino, (viva la France). We entered the ballroom where our dear Louise Triano was giving dancing lessons to those wonderfully clumsy feet of Charles Haber, Charles Yanulevich and Frank Moriano, in some of Hollywood's latest contortions to the music of Sam Santaniello (swell Jewish name, eh!), and his Santonians . . .

In the same department of music, we found Bill Schwarz, whose talented hands rippled up and down the white ivories of the grand piano, tempting the patrons to buy some of the more popular music of the day.

We were led to the Science Equipment department, where we found Joe Frame, the chief salesman, and widely known Physicist. He had already disproved Einstein's theory of relativity and was working on the theory that East Side High School mathematically never existed. (Some crust, I'll say) . . .

Before leaving, we went to the business offices, where we found William Klapay engaged as chief accountant over a staff of secretaries, Bertha Hanas, B. Schrupp, R. Roudi, L. Nitkiewicz, D. Sciarillo, J. Cuzzacoli, and M. Horvath.

Remembering that we had received invitations from G. M. G. studios under the direction of the famous cinema producer, George Kranick, we decided then and there to hop off to Hollywood. On the way to the Airport, in Joe Spinoso's taxi (To the first mile and push the rest) we passed the Neglia and Ferrara Trust Company (don't trust 'em), and we had a little trouble getting through the congestion caused by a run on the bank. Finally, we were off, and after a few dangerous flip-flops through the air, we found that our pilot J. Banks was still inebriated from the "giggle water" procured from Fitzsimmons' "Wonder Bar."

Although badly shaken up and a bit ruffled, we were deposited in one whole piece within the portals of Hollywood. There we were met by the Hon. Buczak and we were whisked off under the escort of the Mayor's private bodyguard, composed of Arnold Gavini, William Janiska, M. Kuchmas, and Ed. Von Suppiny to the gates of G. M. G.!

Kenneth Gawler guided us through the studios and took us first to lot A, where the "Return of Dracula" was being filmed, starring Howard Schantz. Then we went to the make up rooms, where we found G. Laurenzano, the make up artist working on "Tarzan's Mate," P. Stanulis, for sequence on lot B.

Crossing to lot C, we met Joe Fresolone driving a truck load of equipment wherein we espied scenery which we later were told was created by J. Malheiro and painted under the direction of Mary Nunez.

On lot C we watched those pugilistic champions of the screen, Albert Martone and John Napurano casted opposite Lucy Bavero (La Colbert), in "Knock them Dead." (P. S. then J. Luzaitis, the undertaker, buries them).

On Lot D a few shorts were in production starring Mary Masullo as Minnie Mouse and Joe Carfagna as Mickey Mouse! P. Manna sang in a high falsetto the vocal part of Olive Oyl in a Popeye cartoon "I like my Spinach Raw." An educational short, portraying the candy industry, with Ann Palumbo behind the counter, of the finished product was being shot, (at dawn).

That evening in the company of some famous personalities, Professor Odeven of the Parisian School for Girls and F. Fillimon the French Ambassador, we attended the opera "Carmen." In the orchestra J. Fasinski played the violin as the chief soloist.

The audience arose in a body to acclaim the appearance of the world renowned tenor, Peter Finnigan, who sang the leading role in the opera "Carmen," and performed so splendidly that when the curtain fell there was a thunder of applause.

Alma Mater Song

*In the bustling city's bosom,
Like a gem most rare,
Shines the noblest of our treasures,
Shines our High School fair.*

CHORUS

*Hail, all hail, dear East Side High School,
Green thy memory be;
By the bond of happy hours
Are we bound to thee.*

*In the field, the hall, the city,
Loyal to thy name,
Be it ever our endeavor
Far to spread thy fame.*

3

*Down the vista may we see thee,
Of advancing age,
Never dimmed though farther distant,
Youth's bright heritage.*

*Then unite in loyal praises,
Ere the glad days run,
In the world are many high schools,
In our hearts but ONE.*

J. H. TUCKLEY.

The Jolly Student

*You may talk about your Jersey schools, whatever ones you please,
Of Newark's crowd of jolly schools, whose banners kiss the breeze,—
Of banners blue and banners gold and others bright and fair,
Of colors new and colors old applauded everywhere;
Glad echoes ring as loud we sing with hearts and voices strong,
And spirits free all leap to see the colors march along,
But among them all, whate'er befall, not one of them can show
So brave, so true, so strong a crew of students as we know.*

CHORUS

*For we are jolly students of the red and white,
With all our might we fight beneath whatever sky,
Our stirring battle red with spotless white is wed—
Rah! rah! rah! we are all from East Side High.*

The invention of printing from movable types, made in Holland near the middle of the fifteenth century, was the most significant invention of civilized man. The priceless jewel of knowledge, which for centuries could be the possession of only a privileged few, was made available to all by the development of printing. During the last five centuries printing has progressed not only as the spreader and preserver of knowledge and culture, but also as the finest of the graphic arts.

We take pride in turning out artistic printing. Our plant represents the last word in modern equipment, skillful craftsmanship, and dependable service.

You regard your yearbook as the reflection of your school; we regard it as a sample of the art of printing.

Our specialty is distinctive printing that both you and we can be proud of.
